RESOLUTIONS AND POSITION STATEMENTS

1977 POSITION STATEMENTS

At the 1977 annual meeting of the Nebraska Section, Society for Range Management the following position statements on range research and water resources were adopted.

REGARDING RANGE RESEARCH

There is a pressing need to develop an expanded and improved range research program for Nebraska, according to a position statement issued by the Nebraska Section, Society for Range Management.

Citing the current economics of food production as one reason why a better understanding of rangeland management is needed in the state, the statement places a high priority of increasing the quantity and quality of range forage, including subirrigated meadows. It calls also for an improvement of the entire range vegetation research program.

Nebraska ranks high among all states in rangeland production, the statement points out, noting that rangeland occupies one-half of the state. Since the economic benefits to be gained throughout the state are significantly high, says the Nebraska Section, Society for Range Management, it recommends that appropriate agencies and organizations within the state take strong action to accomplish the following:

1. Provide agricultural research monies and efforts for range management consistent with its importance to the economy of the state.
2. Initiate research in those areas where no research effort is being made as well as in those areas requiring long-term data collection.

3. Provide a mechanism for frequent interaction between range managers and those responsible for range research programs.
4. Encourage continued cooperation between the University of Nebraska and state and federal agencies to improve research efforts, share knowledge, and accelerate the implementation of new technology.

REGARDING WATER RESOURCES

All citizens of the state need to join in a united effort to conserve the quantity and protect the quality of Nebraska's water resources. So says the Nebraska Section, Society for Range Management in a position statement calling for coordinated action on the part of citizens, state agencies, and federal agencies.

Specifically, the Nebraska Section, Society for Range Management offers the following goals for conserving and managing wisely the water resources of the state:

1. To establish priority of use, water resources must be maintained for human and livestock consumption as well as for other domestic needs above all else; for food and fiber production closely following; and then for commercial uses, such as power generation and manufacturing, which uses should be carefully integrated with recreation and wildlife needs.
2. To achieve acceptable water quality, the quality of groundwater should be maintained within limits of human consumption and the quality of surface water should be maintained within livestock quality.
3. To provide the necessary regulatory mechanisms, the state legislature should produce updated and comprehensive laws pertaining to the use of surface water and groundwater in the state.

To achieve the above goals, the Nebraska Section, Society for Range Management recommends that all citizens of the state undertake supporting activities as the following:

1. Promote proper land and water management as the two best methods of conserving and improving water quantity and quality.
2. Encourage cooperative efforts of all agencies concerned with water resources management.
3. Promote educational efforts relating to the proper use and management of land and water resources, especially in the area of irrigation.

Sound planning for the future in the area of water resources, concludes the statement is necessary in order to avoid creating potential hazards for ourselves as well as for future generations.
